This is a book of practice materials for the improvement of voice and articulation. It stresses auditory discrimination, and takes its organization from the phonetic and acoustic features of speech. It includes some introductory information about these features. It is designed for use either as a textbook or as a source of materials for correction of disorders.

Discusses the fundamental features of verbal and nonverbal communication. This book states that the problem of understanding human behaviour in terms of personal traits, and the possibility of an algorithmic implementation that exploits personal traits to identify a person unambiguously, are among the challenges of modern science and technology.

A well-organized book with a wealth of good practice material. Drawings are excellent. I have worn out a copy, and am glad it is still in print for my course.-John A. Applegate, Northeast Missouri State
