Description. 'Writing the war on terrorism' examines the public language of the war on terrorism, and the way that rhetoric has been used to justify the global counter-terrorism offensive as a response to 9/11. It discusses how language has been used to deliberately manipulate public anxiety about terrorist threats to gain support for military action, and how the abuse of Iraqi prisoners has been normalised through rhetoric and practice. .

~~Manchester University Press - Writing the war on terrorism~~

Richard Jackson's Writing the War on Terrorism is a useful study into American political discourse surrounding terrorism and counter-terrorism but ultimately self-defeating in simply trying to argue against the dominant narrative with its own idea of the truth, and ineffective in its proposed alternatives. In mapping the power relations between the dominant and non-dominant discourses, Jackson argues that "the 'war on terrorism' is now the dominant political narrative in America ...

~~Introduction in: Writing the war on terrorism~~

Jackson simply makes us aware of the science of critical discourse analysis and applies it to the most interesting contemporary issue, which is terrorism and the 'war on terror'. Jackson makes a point of writing 11th September 2001 as opposed to 9-11, as using the term 9-11 makes the events lose their specific history and context, what he argues is a deliberate ploy by the Bush administration and the media.
